

Jenn Dunphy | Politicker

If there's a presidential debate the same night as a Red Sox playoff game, Jenn favors Boston's oldest game. "There's no doubt I'd watch the debate," says the youthful associate director at O'Neill and Associates, a lobbying firm. She has lived and breathed politics since caucusing in Iowa for John Kerry. She's helped numerous campaigns and volunteered on Hillary Clinton's Massachusetts finance steering committee. She co-chairs the young professionals segment of the Mass. Women's Political Caucus and is organizing the group's Wonder Women event, Oct. 21 at Johnnies on the Side.

"Coming out of college, I didn't want to join just any networking group, but wanted to be with people who would expose me to opportunities," she says. Her eyes light up at "campaign invasions," door-to-door canvassing for candidates. Will she ever occupy an office in the State House?

Jenn responds like a politician: "I don't know if I'm ever going to make it in there but I wouldn't be opposed to it."
